Brief description of Project

The project is an interpretive display presenting a brief history of water and irrigation in the San Gabriel Valley prior to 1950. Consisting of photo blowups, irrigation related artifacts, simulated components and text; the display will address the questions of where water came from and how the system was maintained in the early days of ranching. In addition, the display will present a map of the wells that were functioning up to 1950 juxtaposed with a map of today's mostly contaminated sites. The high water usage levels will be compared to today's water saving-techniques. Tied into our educational gardening program, the display will emphasize that water is a finite resource that must be conserved in order to meet the needs of our population.

I certify that the information contained in this Project Application form and Application requirements is accurate.
